

MONTHLY CAPITAL MARKETS REVIEW

News from Asset Management Services Institutional Research

NOVEMBER HIGHLIGHTS

- In November, domestic stocks outperformed international equities, with mid-cap equity represented by the Russell Mid Cap index leading the way and returning 3.36%. Although year-to-date investors have poured into growth-style stocks, value outperformed growth and core in November across all market caps.
- Telecom stocks recuperated some of the year-to-date losses by gaining 6.03%, but they remain the weakest performing sector in 2017 with a year-to-date loss of 6.64%. At the other end of the spectrum, information technology companies continue to lead other sectors with a gain of 38.82% year-to-date.
- Among international investments, emerging markets stocks were eclipsed by international developed small-cap equity which gained 1.58% compared to only 0.20%, as per MSCI EAFE Small Cap and MSCI EM indices, respectively.
- As the 10-year treasury yield increased from 2.38 to 2.41, it applied some downward pressures on fixed income returns for the month, with the U.S. core fixed income posting a small loss of 13 basis points as per the BBgBarc US Agg Bond index.
- While crude oil and gold gained 5.55% and 0.79%, respectively, other commodities exhibited weakness as per the Bloomberg Commodity index, which posted a loss of 0.46% in November.

It should not be assumed that any investment recommendation or decisions made in the future will be profitable or will equal any investment performance discussed herein.

Fixed income securities are subject to interest rate risk. Generally, when interest rates rise, bond prices fall, and vice versa. Specific sector investing can be subject to different and greater risks than more diversified investments. Investing in small-cap and mid-cap stocks generally involves greater risks, and, therefore, may not be appropriate for every investor. International investing also involves special risks, including currency fluctuations, different financial accounting standards, and possible political and economic volatility. High-yield (below investment-grade) bonds are not suitable for all investors. When appropriate, these bonds should only comprise a modest portion of your portfolio. Commodities trading is generally considered speculative because of the significant potential for investment loss. Specific sector investing such as real estate can be subject to different and greater risks than more diversified investments. Declines in the value of real estate, economic conditions, property taxes, tax laws and interest rates all present potential risks to real estate investments.
